FISH CUSTARD!

Amelia Pond's face was the first face the Eleventh Doctor saw. To help him get over his tricky regeneration she made him lots of food - but he only liked fish fingers and custard. Gross!

THE WHALE TALE!

On her first adventure in space, Amy followed her instincts to free a Star Whale that carried a country on its back. She guessed it was friendly and saved it from loads of pain.

WEAPON WARNING!

Amy wanted to keep Kahler-Jex safe, even though he was a bad guy. She took hold of a gun, but it kept going off in her hands. Oops!

When the Doctor was electrocuted in the Underhenge, Amy was left to fight a human-hungry Cyberhead on her own. Luckily, Roman Rory turned up!

When the TARDIS landed aboard a pirate ship, Amy was thrown below deck as the Doctor and Rory were ordered to walk the plank. But Amy reappeared with a sword to save them!

THE GIRL WHO WAITED... AND WAITED!

Poor Amy became angry older Amy when she became trapped in the Two Streams facility and had to wait 36 years for rescue. She then gave up her life to save the younger Amy!

DALEK ATTACK!

When Amy visited the Asylum of the Daleks, she lost her wristband and the nanocloud started turning her into a human Dalek! Argh!

FIRST ENCOUNTER!

The Tenth Doctor and Martha were touched by a Weeping Angel and zapped back to 1969 - without the TARDIS! Angels get their power from sending people back in time and then living off the potential energy from the life they would have had. That's creepy!

DVD MESSAGE

TARDIS TAKEOVER

The Weeping Angels planned on taking the Doctor's TARDIS. Their scheme was ruined when Sally Sparrow took the TARDIS key from a quantum locked Angel. The Doctor tried to help from the past, talking to her in DVD messages.

LOCKED IN A LOOK!

Sally and Larry Nightingale were chased by the Weeping Angels into the basement of Wester Drumlins, where they found the TARDIS. The pair were able to send the TARDIS back to the 1960s without them, and it left the scary Angels staring at each other - and that meant they became quantum locked! Yikes!

While searching through an old temple, the Doctor, River, Amy and a bunch of Clerics realised that all of the crumbling old statues around them were Weeping Angels. Amy looked into an Angel's eye and thought she was turning into stone!

FALLING

CRACK ATTACK!

The Weeping Angels were sucked into a crack in time and space when they drained too much energy from the Byzantium - which turned off the artificial gravity. This means this horrible handful were wiped out of existence! No one wept about that, did they?

FAST FACT!

Weeping Angels can have babies - and they look just like cherubs! Brrrr!

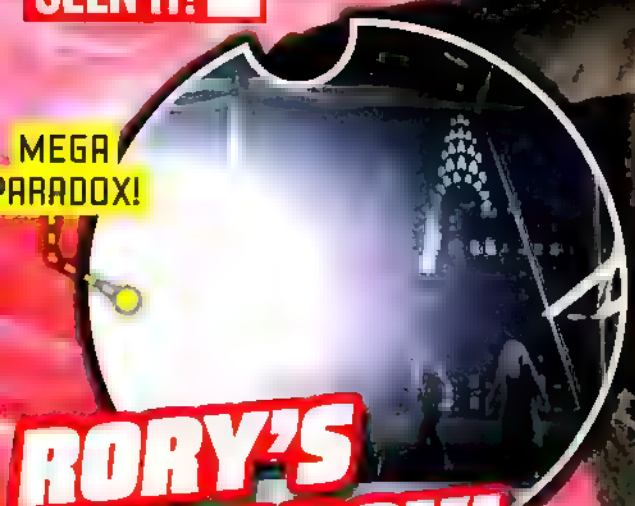

HORROR HOUSE!

WINTER QUAY

In one of their deadliest schemes to date, the Weeping Angels took over Manhattan, and had a building full of victims that they kept sending back in time. The Angels were being powered by the energy. Rory was sent to Winter Quay and learnt that it would be his destiny to live to death as an Angel food supply!

SEEN IT!

MEGA PARADOX!

RORY'S PARADOX!

River Song pointed out that the Angels had taken over every statue in New York - the city that never sleeps was a perfect food source. Rory decided that he wouldn't be an Angel victim, so he planned to cause a paradox by dying. Amy wanted to be with him, so they jumped off Winter Quay and stopped the Angels' plans!

FAST FACT!

The Angels once grabbed the Eleventh Doctor and pulled his jacket off!

DEVASTATED!

GOODBYE PONDS!

Even though Amy and Rory had defeated the Weeping Angels, a single survivor sent Rory back in time. Rory had just spotted his own gravestone. Amy let the Angel send her back in time too, and she got to live a full, happy life with Rory.

DOCTOR, DOCTOR!

Go on, ask me anything!

DO YOU HAVE A PROBLEM THAT NEEDS SOLVING? THEN ASK THE DOCTOR

TRICKY TRICEY

Dear Doctor,

When you ride Tricey, what do you hold on to? Is it very bumpy? Did you nearly fall off?

Georgia Orton

Where are the brakes?

THE DOCTOR REPLIES:

The average Triceratops is not built to carry passengers, and would fail basic road safety standards. It's like the bony part at the back of Tricey's skull, and I'm gripped with my legs. It's a bit like riding a horse, except you don't paddle. It's bigger and smells, and less easy to control, so not like riding a bike at all. Yes, it's bumpy and I nearly fell off. Luckily, there were robots shooting at me at the time which helped me concentrate on holding on. Wait, is 'luckily' the word I mean?

Oh no! Dino-drool!

SMALL SILENCE

Dear Doctor,

Have you ever seen a baby Silence?

Freya Lenton

THE DOCTOR REPLIES:

I was going to say no, but checking my 500-year diary, it turns out I have seen baby Silence and it's just that I don't remember. They are quite sweet at that age. Like their parents, they use their wicked powers to make humans their helpless slaves. But they also like cuddles and teddy bears, too. Naaaaaaaw.

Waaah!

BIG BLUE

Yuck! It just isn't me!

Dear Doctor,
Would you ever consider painting the TARDIS a different colour?
Eddie Clark

THE DOCTOR REPLIES:
Do you think the old girl needs a cool, new look? The people of the planet Terra Alpha once painted her bright pink, which I thought was very fetching. It might make her easier to spot, which could get us into trouble. I think she should be nicely inconspicuous. Hmm... So what colour should my TARDIS be? You can have any colour as long as it's blue.

The Dalek set is made of metal and has a striped pattern. It's a very complex piece of machinery. There are many moving parts and a lot of wiring. It's a real engineering marvel.

As well as the Dalek set, there's also a Dalek prop. This is a smaller version of the Dalek set and is used for close-up shots. It's also made of metal and has a striped pattern. It's a very detailed piece of work.

BUILDING DALEKS

To start off, a Dalek mould is made.

This produces a very rough fibreglass Dalek. Here is the 'skirt'.

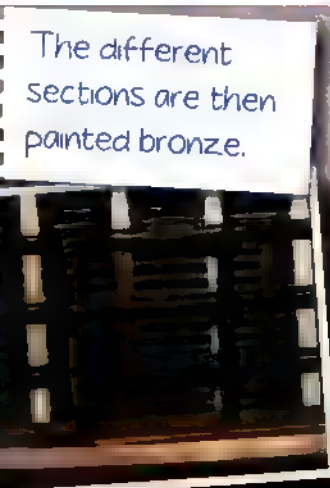

Next up, the Dalek is trimmed and sanded.

One of Matt Smith's favourite Doctor Who moments was blowing up all the Daleks.

The different sections are then painted bronze.
